For the first time ever in. the world of guns. Breaking the handles off a gun,.Sunday's encounter between the Blues and United will be the 10th time the two clubs have played each other in the competition. They will be aiming for their first win in 10 games, with the last four coming against Premier League opposition. Last time they met at Old Trafford the game ended 2-2, with Southampton managing a last-minute equaliser to save their blushes. Any one else would think it's a bit of a psychological advantage to be playing at Old Trafford on a Sunday afternoon on the first day of the new season. But Graham Shakespeare is putting his faith in something a lot more powerful than a winning football team. He told BBC Radio Lancashire: "We're not looking for a psychological advantage, we're not looking for a tactical advantage. "This match is going to be a match that will decide whether we can climb the table. We need to win our last two games. "We believe if we can win these two games, especially away from home, then we can get up the table and get to the top of the table." And he's looking for a repeat of last season's final day, when Newcastle United, with a defeat at home to Chelsea, went through on the basis of a better goal difference. "We would love for that to happen, to see it again," said Shakespeare. "If Newcastle can do that, they will have the chance of going up and going to the big boys at the top end of the table." With the ever-present stability of Premier League football, the game against Southampton represents the Blues' first chance to find out where they are going. "We're looking forward to it," he said. "We're a football club with the biggest ambitions and we want to be in the Champions League." Faced with the challenge of trying to break down a Manchester United side which has won the last five meetings, 1cb139a0ed
