The license only applies to moddable products. UK is a long way from dying in that regard, but it's a big gap between our experience of World of Warcraft as opposed to most EU countries experiences. ~~~ chillingeffect Do you know which products are not moddable because of their EU law? ~~~ fidotron I don't, but there are plenty of games that don't work with MUDs as they are, eg WoW has had patches that blacklisted the vast majority of muddable servers as they didn't correctly support localisation. ------ stuartzeeman It makes sense that they didn't want to block on specific countries - a different distribution model could be implemented that does not have this problem, for example, a Playstation 3 game that is only available in Japan (www.chocolatehigh.com/game/chocolate-high/faq-free-accounts/), although this falls in the line of what exactly RuneScape 2 is. ~~~ amarcus I had not even considered such a scenario, and I find it far more unlikely
